

First the rains fail to arrive - again. Seeds don't sprout. Then food prices shoot up - again. Families don't have enough to eat. Children are gripped by hunger. Their vision blurs. Muscles waste away. Liver, spleen and kidneys fail. This is severe acute malnutrition. And right now it threatens 13 million lives. But it's a symptom of an even bigger crisis. Climate change. War.

Deadly poverty. A broken food system that locks us all in a savage cycle.

PRIME MINISTER, DO YOU HAVE THE GUTS?

You can change all this. First you put global hunger on the G7 agenda. Malnourished children get life-saving treatment. Then you pursue peace and push to open up the flow of food to where it's needed. You invest in a safe climate and healthy natural world. You fix the food system so it works for people and planet. All of that work means good food is available for all. This is the world's last famine. This is a future worth fighting for.
